Reading

Students have been reading Nonfiction texts and using details to determine an author's point of view about a topic. They should be familiar with the terms fact and opinion. They have moved on to a Fiction standard for finding a character's point of view through thoughts, words, or feelings. Next is week 6 of Unit 2, Students will have a shared opinion writing topic and take ISIP and Unit assessments for the month.

Math

Students continue to practice multiplication skills while learning about the inverse operation of division. Students are applying some of the same strategies for multiplication to solve division such as; arrays, and equal groups. Another 3rd grade skill is to solve word problems involving one or more of these operations and understand how to represent and compute what is written in the problem.

Writing

Students are learning how to take the skills they have learned from our point of view standard and determine their own opinion about a topic. They will be drafting their own opinion essay.

Science/Social Studies

Students are starting a Unit on heat and light energy. They will observe, discuss, and investigate the transfer of energy. They will also learn about ways heat is produced, measured, or changed. Real life application: have students practice reading a thermometer and checking the weather for predicted temperatures. Make observations about temperature differences certain times of day or in various locations such as shade or direct sunlight.
